Book 2 from the infamous Dennis Fish Trilogy. Praise the Lord and raise the drawbridge, Dennis Fish, the mischievous misogynist of misadventure is back again for a second, delicious instalment of mayhem and for my money the gigantic gonk is funnier than ever. In fact if you don't laugh at his escapades this time, I won't just eat my hat, I will eat my donkey jacket too!

With Dennis' mood changing more often than the headline titles of his books, this hilarious and extremely preposterous comedy sequel, sees the aged lothario taking a very ill-advised tilt at becoming an elected member of the British parliament. Standing as a candidate in the nefarious, leafy and one-time completely ignored Oxfordshire seat of Withey, Dennis pits his wits against no less an adversary than the incumbent, preening and plumpy Prime Minister David Chameleon, not to mention Neil Lefarge, the brooding UQUIP guardian of the black arts, who is also stirring things up in the same constituency.

Dennis, standing on his little thought out Anti-Propaganda ticket has his hands rather full, so he calls upon the political expertise of the Texan strongman Bubba Zendowski, a workaholic heavyweight who has been successful on both sides of the political fence in America. The election campaign, which is soon mired in the expected Fish controversy and lunacy, lurches from one crazy spat to another, with all the usual chaotic consequences. Dennis displays his notorious, firebrand mixture of confrontation, bluster and aggression and surprise, surprise, by turning logic on it's head, he soon finds that his charismatic, geriatric genius, together with his attractive Anti-Propaganda message mobilises support right across the county.

Miraculously, he becomes a bona fide contender for the seat, giving, in the process, Lefarge and Chameleon the biggest fight of their political lives.

A spectacular side-splitting book with eerie prophecy regarding Corbynmania, this also contains a typically, spectacular, side-splitting ending, Winston Churchill, Lord Nelson, James Bond, Alan Partridge and Dennis Fish, saviours of England, has rightly received generous praise in several of Britain's most prestigious publications. It received a unanimous 5* rating from lunatic editor 'The Crowman' of The Worzel Gummidge Weekly and an urgent 'buy' rating from feckless broking house Broadmoor Securities. This book simply has to be read, because it's too damn funny not to, so what the hell are you waiting for? Let's get this book and the trilogy as a whole, up where it deserves to be and that is @ NUMBER 1 in the download charts. Please don't forget the other two books from the trilogy either. May the force be with you my literary friends. Luca Toscallini.
