PURPOSE OF THE BOOK

This book doesn't concern human beings.

Object of the book are the stones, or better, that articulated whole of concrete and iron that has given form to the Bunker of the Führer, in the garden of the Old Chancellery of the Reich.

This bunker was built for lasting and still lasts.

Why this book has for object the bunker? Because the bunker is still there in some place: all is to be done is to find it.

The bunker of Hitler is undeniably the place more important among the witnessing of the second world war. Having hidden it, camouflaged and disguised in the arch of this last half century has increased its legend, rather than to calm it.

Once few people were interested in its history, but today it's enough to stop few hours in the territory where it is supposed to be buried, to notice groups of visitors, in narrow sequence, looking for information and comparisons.

By now almost all tourist agencies in Berlin have inserted in their city tours a stop to the Führerbunker. And what do the poor tourists see? Nothing! An ample zone of parking lots, quarters and game fields in which the bunker should be located. These delegations of tourists cross gateways of residential buildings, trample on miserable flower-beds, climb over low fences following guides that tell them historical events of the places but that cannot answer to the expectations of the groups: but where is it? How is it done? After a series of tortuous and misleading searches, after investigations on the spot, surveys, comparisons and consultations of original sources, I have located, with the approximation of some decimetre, the spot where the bunker rests.

I could dig it out by myself, I would need (besides the authorization) a pick and a shovel. After all, the bunker is only covered with the sandy ground on which all Berlin lies.

To discover the bunker is very easy. It has been more difficult, in these last 59 years, to try to hide it.

At the end of this book the reader will discover that what I boldly affirmed in these lines is not utopia.

To discover the bunker, this embarrassing witness of the horrors of the nazism, is easy; what is difficult is to find the political wish to do it.

How do the human beings enter the pages of this book? As ghosts they enter.

As in a comedy by Pirandello they enter and go out "through the common " everyone bringing the proper fragment of life to the stories that happened in this box of concrete, of about four hundreds square meters, a little larger than a luxury flat.

The ghosts that enter the narration of this book are only those that have given a contribution of "human" experiences in this hell, crowded of demons.

The charm of the bunker is that here happened few but dramatic events with human implications intermingled to frightening histories of inhuman folly.

Here children played and died, here a marriage was celebrated, here confessions and touching meetings happened, but here, in a paroxysmal, demented growing, were made the preparations for the long trip toward Walhalla, toward Odino, by the persons responsible for tens of millions of people that died in the second world war.

Since I found this place, I have it here under my feet, I will tell the readers that will have the patience to follow me, where this bunker is, how it was done, how it is now and which ghosts of human beings and demons still populate it.
